Holly Hill's Historic Homes Battle Hurricane Matthew

Holly Hill survived Hurricane Matthew on October 7th, but not without a lot of cleanup. Residents lost power and some water when a water main broke. The Museum closed and had to remain closed for a week to allow its volunteers time to recover. President Rentha Flowers did open the museum upon request.

Below: Daytona Avenue and 9th Street. The historic district area homes had plenty of downed trees..

827 Daytona Ave, built in 1939, had a tree fall on its roof.

847 Daytona Ave, built in 1946, lost a tree.

Right: 850 Daytona Avenue, known for its plentiful magnolia trees lost one of the largest and oldest in the area per the opinion of one tree serviceman. Home built circa 1935.

Museum's Traveling Boxcar Model at Two Events

Our Merci Boxcar model continued its duty to educate people of its history in WWII. Rentha Flowers and Barbara Koehler gave a presentation to Bishop's Glen residents in August. Arthur Byrnes added some lively stories on the use of the boxcar during the war. Another presentation was given in September at the City Island Library for a genealogical society group. Both groups were eager to learn the boxcar's history and to receive a copy of the booklet the Society has created. If you would like to help continue these programs you may donate to help defer cost of booklet printing or volunteer to help host.

Bishop's Dairy Farm

This tractor in this photo was one of the last tractors used by Mr. Harrell Bishop on this Dairy Farm. This tractor is still in use today to keep the grounds in good shape by its care taker, Mr. Snake Andrews.

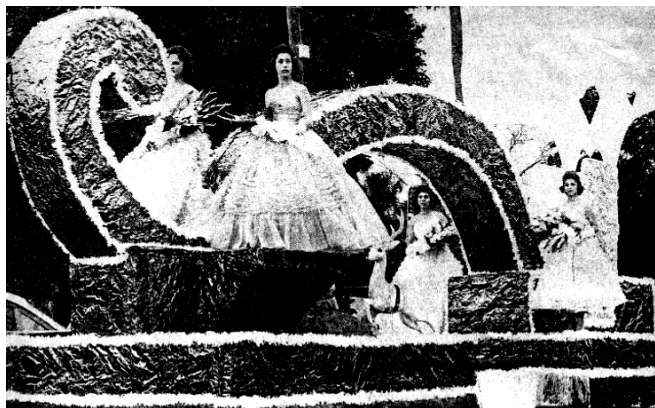

A major producer of dairy products in the area was Bishop's Dairy, owned by the Bishop family. Founded in the early 1900's, Thad Bishop and his family raised Guernsey and Jersey cows that gave rich milk. The locals fondly remember the ice cream the Bishops made and sold at the shop on the property. Part of Bishop's property was sold to a Retirement community: aptly named Bishop's Glen. If you have any early photos of the dairy please share them with the Museum.
